Bios

Jenni Bauer (Director)

Love of horror can be an inherited trait. Jenni Bauer got it from her mother, Wilma. She inhaled Stephen King books and even encouraged her to see The Exorcist at age eight saying, "It's about good and evil!!"

Robert L. Berry (Writer)

In terms of my love of spooky things, I had two great things going for me when I was growing up in Emporia, KS in the late 70s and 80s: a mother who loved horror novels and movies, and a television station that broadcast a show called "Creature Feature". While some other kids had to get their Hammer Horror fix from old guys in dusty overcoats with bad puns, I got mine from a pretty Elvira knock-off with bad puns. Cremat Mortem was her name, and slinging B-Movie horror from KSHB in Kansas City was her game.

Patti A. Neff-Tiven (Producer)

I saw The Shining when I was 8. I still have an unnatural fear of twins and bathtubs.

Ian Prikryl (Frederick Loren)

Ian snuck into The Shining at age 9 and has been a scare addict ever since. Heroes include John Carpenter, Wes Craven and George Romero.

Mackenzey Cade (Lance Schroeder)

Wes Craven was a huge influence on my childhood and he was the spark for my love of horror movies. I can quote "A Nightmare on Elm St." from start to finish!

NeNe Clayton-Jones (Ruth Bridges)

Children of the corn forced me to decide AGAINST becoming a teacher. I didn't want any crazy kids killing me over homework.

Craig Kanne (Watson Pritchard)

One of my first paying acting jobs after leaving college in the early 1980s was appearing in a horror film produced in Austin with two of the stars of "The Texas Chainsaw Massacre". The movie was (eventually) called "Future Kill" and was truly a horror in so many (mostly unintentional) ways.

David Theis (Dr. David Trent)

One of the first horror movies I saw that really scared me was The Shining when I was 12. Particularly the bathtub scene when the beautiful woman turns into a scary clown lady in Jack's arms. Gave me nightmares for a while.

Kelsey Mazak (Nora Manning)

Kelsey Mazak is actually not a huge fan of horror films. They scare her too much.

Chris Romani (Annabelle Loren)

Chris has had a love affair with horror ever since she can remember - it's been a "phase" that she never grew out of. She prefers old school horror movies and supernatural thrillers. Her favorite horror movie is The Exorcist.

Saige Hilton (Mrs. Slydes)

My first horror movie at the old age of 5, was Poltergeist. Needless to say, I still cannot sleep with my closet door open.

Davon Johnson (Jonah Slydes)

Favorite scary movie is 13 Ghosts. Favorite line is, "I guarantee nothing."
